MAY 2014

THE WAITING BEGINS. There's no need to explain to anyone that this is the time of year we all wait for. We watch the 6m maps more. We set a radio to an open frequency and wait for something to suddenly appear. We watch the messages on the WTFDA reflector. We check our antennas and lead-in to make sure those signals don't get lost. It's almost skip time!!

MEMBERS AND MORE. During the period from March 16th through April 14th we received renewal dues from Joe Perge (OH), Frank Merrill (IL), Chris Cervantez (IL), Allan Dunn (MA), David Cox (AL), Gerry Hart (NY), Dave Nieman (PA), Pat Dyer (TX), Luis Franceschi (PR), Robert Grant (MI), Chris Dunne (FL), Jon Hamilton (ON), Jason Hustedt (NJ), Tim Katlic (CA), Bill Dvorak (WI), Peter Taylor (WA), Ivan Silva (Brazil), Mike Ehrhardt (NY), Christian Ferland (QC) and David Pierce (VA). Also we say welcome back to Steve Naetzker out in the deserts of California. Thank you all for your support! And welcome to our newest member Greg Shoom. Greg lives in a highrise in Toronto and DXes with a Sony XDR-F1HD and an omni-directional FM antenna. Welcome Greg!

Adam Ebel reports that WKJX-FM in Elizabeth City, NC suffered tornado damage recently and was off the air. He thinks they may be back with an open carrier (April 27th). The station's Facebook page does state the fact that they were hit by a tornado on 4/26 but that all personnel are okay.

Chris Dunne sent an email advising that anyone who thinks they hear ZBM 89.1 in Bermuda this season can check ZBM's webstream at <http://power95.bm> to verify it. You can check both stations there (89.1 and 94.9).

The cover photo this month shows Mike Glass' ten foot UHF dish and 62' crank up tower in transit from his present home to his new location north of Lebanon, IN. To my knowledge, there is no one else in the hobby using a ten foot UHF dish for DXing.

Gary Hickerson received an email from Winegard Technical Services on March 31st advising him that the HD8200U VHF antenna is still available.

A note from Bill Dvorak says "I have declared my AM season over and sent my Drake R8A to one of the ex-Drake technicians for a checkup and repair. I will fill the void by putting up an upgrade in my FM setup. I have had a far from ideal setup for the last 7 plus years, since we moved to our new address. So this is a season that I am really looking forward to."

And that's it for now. Recent VUDs have been on the thin side. Perhaps next month we will have more DX to report to you. See you then.

PUBLICATION OF THE PAPER VUD WILL CEASE WITH THE JUNE 2014 ISSUE

The VUD will be published as an E-ZINE only from July 2014 onward.

Renewals received for the paper VUD will no longer be accepted.

We are sorry for any inconvenience this change will cause.

We will work to convert willing members to the electronic VUD and work to address the individual concerns of others, if possible.

For refunds of partially used memberships, please send your request to us in writing or by email before June 1st, 2014 so we may finish processing them before June 15th at the latest.

Requests received after June first may not be honored.

WFSB Hartford, Connecticut has asked the FCC to require KVVV to use virtual channel 33.

KVVV is of course the station moving from Ely, Nevada to New Jersey, with its transmitter to be located in New York City. KVVV will be on RF channel 3.

WFSB was on channel 3 in the analog era. It still uses virtual channel 3 but is on RF channel 33.

The coverage areas of the two stations will overlap in Fairfield County, Connecticut.

WFSB wants to avoid a virtual channel conflict – they wish to ensure there is only one virtual channel 3 in Fairfield County. The ATSC standard anticipated this type of conflict and provided for exactly the relief WFSB is requesting.

The Editor's Note

We finally made it! After a winter in which it seemed the atmosphere simply forgot how to produce DX (veteran DX'er Ed Phelps in Kentucky noted it as "the worst winter tropo season in 25 years"), temperatures for the most part have adjusted to the calendar, and the onset of the DX season is here. There were a handful of tropo occurrences in April with activity found around the Gulf coast, spreading northward on the 13th when Ed in Kentucky had some Southeast Texas DTV decodes.

Here's to an E-Skip season with increased activity compared to the past two years, and weather that will be favorable for tropo as well. We have reports from Doug Smith and Dennis Smith (no relation) inside this edition of C2CTV DX.

Mexico to Distribute 14 Million Digital TVs for the Analog Switch Off

by Hernán Amaya | February 26, 2014

Mexico's Transports and Communications Secretary (SCT in Spanish) informed that a budget of USD 1.438 billion will be destined to supply low income families with digital TV sets in order to face the analog switch off. It is calculated that this figure will be able to purchase between 13 and 14 million devices.

Thus, the Mexican strategy change has been confirmed, since it won't distribute STBs for the analog switch off but will directly supply television sets. The 120,000 digital TVs for the cities of Nuevo Laredo and Reynosa which were recently tendered will be the first to be delivered in this plan (the process will begin on March 9th) and will work as a pilot test.

Gerardo Ruiz Esparza, Head of the SCT, pointed out that for the delivery of the devices "a register of inhabitants that will be developed by the Ministry of Social Development will be taken into account, since the criteria states that every family that receives a benefit from the Ministry is entitled to get a free TV set".

The deadline for the transition from the analog to the digital system in Mexico is set on December 31st, 2015. So far, the only city that has done the switch off has been Tijuana. The next estimated dates are on May 2014, for Monterrey, Matamoros, Ciudad Juárez, Nuevo Laredo and Reynosa; November 14th for the central region of the country; and November 2015 for the South of the Mexican territory.

Things have certainly taken off since my first FM report, which was all in-state DX. The last few months have seen DX from Alabama, Louisiana, Texas(!), Cuba and The Bahamas. Stations, local or DX, have now been logged on every frequency (counting IBOC as being a local station on its frequency). My tropo record, set TV DXing decades ago, was reduced to a smoldering wreck. My DX total (76) already exceeds my local total (72)... and I haven't logged my first e-skip catch yet! The tropo record was shattered on 2/17 by KGSR near Austin, Texas, which fortunately IDed with its call letters. There were no other stations beyond Mobile that night, but another opening on 3/30 filled in the gap nicely, with one station near San Antonio coming just one kilometer short of breaking KGSR's month-old record. I also made my first recordings during this opening. They're posted on the WTFDA Forums. Now that I've seen what tropo can do on FM, I'm eager to see what e-skip can do. First Es catches in my next report. 73s

NEWS ITEM: Manhattan U.S. Attorney Announces Seizure of Radio Equipment from Pirate Radio Stations

The FCC announced the forfeiture of radio transmission and production equipment allegedly used in the illegal broadcast of pirate radio stations on a total of four different FM frequencies, and on April 2, 2014, FCC agents and Deputy U.S. Marshals, pursuant to warrants, seized the radio transmission and production equipment.

FCC Acting Enforcement Bureau Chief Travis LeBlanc said: "As alleged, these pirate radio stations were for-profit businesses that broke the law to line their own pockets while disrupting legitimate broadcasters. They should be out of business and off the air." According to the two Complaints unsealed in Manhattan federal court, and various unsealed documents associated with the two warrants executed on April 2:

FCC agents identified a commercial space at 80-84 West 181st Street in the Bronx as the production studio for "Rika FM," which illegally broadcasts its programming on 94.5 and 94.9 MHz. FCC agents also identified a residence at 1370 St. Nicholas Avenue in Manhattan as the location of the radio transmission equipment by means of which "Rika FM" was illegally broadcast.

FCC agents also identified radio transmission equipment at a second residence at 1370 St. Nicholas Avenue in Manhattan that was being used to illegally broadcast on 95.3 MHz and 100.1 MHz.

Mexico's Turbulent Digital TV Transition

The Weekly Riff
March 18, 2014 by Greg Scoblete

Analog TV shut-offs tend to be complicated and bumpy affairs under the best of circumstances. The transition in Mexico, however, has seen more than its fair share of turbulence and false-starts.

The original analog shut-off (ASO) was slated for 2021, but the previous president, Philippe Calderon decided to dramatically accelerate the change, bringing the ASO to 2015. To meet such an ambitious goal, the government planned to subsidize and install converter set-top boxes and antennas for poorer households starting in Tijuana, the first city to switch off its analog broadcasts.

While the schedule was ambitious, Tijuana residents who couldn't afford them were provided with converter boxes and when the government was confident that roughly 93 percent of the city's households had access to digital signals, it prepared to end analog broadcasts. Unfortunately, the shutdown happened to coincide with a local election and quickly became a lightning rod for controversy. The city's mayor pleaded for a delay as did other officials and interest groups. Having briefly shut down analog signals, the government relented, reversing course briefly to allow the election to proceed while eliciting howls of protest that it was carrying water for the country's monopolistic broadcasters.

The next round of switch-offs are due in November of this year, where at least 15 cities will convert to digital. Only now, it seems, they'll be doing so without subsidized converter boxes. According to a statement released by the Ministry of Communications and Transport, Mexico would stop installing decoder boxes and instead subsidize and install 24-inch televisions, despite the huge cost differential (the boxes are said to cost between $48 and $90 while the TVs range from $218 to $436).

Two local manufacturers, Diamond Electronics and Foxconn Electronics, were tapped for an initial order of 120,000 units for a pilot run in the cities of Nuevo Laredo and Reynosa, but the country will need millions more if it plans to finish out its transition relying on TVs instead of converter boxes. Such a change raises a host of questions about the feasibility of Mexico's shut off timeline — namely, how a program of such importance can unfold with seemingly so little strategic forethought.

Ironically, while the transition veers its way toward an uncertain conclusion, other facets of Mexico's telecommunications market seem to be improving. As part of President Enrique Pena Nieto's comprehensive push to reign in monopolistic sectors of Mexico's economy, regulators have ruled that, among other changes, incumbent telecom providers must open up their last mile connections to competitors. Regulatory reforms may spur long overdue competition and investment in the country's digital infrastructure. Together with the freeing up of analog TV spectrum for better wireless services, Mexico may be on the cusp of pushing its economy deeper into the information age. It just won't be an easy ride

Aereo's Supreme Court case balances innovation and copyright

By Washington Post Editorial Board, Published: April 25

At the Supreme Court on Tuesday, some observers have noted, the justices seemed flummoxed by the case of Aereo, a company that pulls network TV broadcasts off the airwaves and streams it to online users for a monthly fee. That is not because the court's jurists are hopelessly incapable of considering its business model. It is because taking decades-old law and applying it to new technological reality is hard.

The principles at stake, however, are much simpler. Aereo's critics want to shore up the exclusive right of the people who own copyrights on programming to control — and profit from — the distribution of their work. Aereo benefits from the notion that the networks are allowed to send such programming over the public airwaves on the condition that anyone can view it for free.

On principle, the balance should obviously favor consumers. There is no difference between getting network television for free with an antenna or doing so with an Internet connection that warrants different treatment of the two — beyond accounting for the costs of the different sorts of infrastructure that makes each possible. The court has underscored that individuals have the right to put up antennas, record programs and use that material privately. The essence of Aereo's case is that the firm provides the infrastructure — antennas, recording space and streaming setup — so that people do not have to bother with all of that on their own. Which makes sense.

There is a chance, however, that the court will determine that the law does not leave enough room for that principle to survive. In the past, the justices typically and rightly sided with those defending new technologies that promote consumer access. Congress, though, established different rules. Under the Copyright Act of 1976, copyright holders have broad control over the transmission — and retransmission — of their content. Given those rules, Aereo's critics might well succeed in shutting down the service.

If that happens, Congress may have to step in — not simply for Aereo's sake but also to limit the damage such a ruling might do to other services that are reshaping for the better the way Americans consume programs. The justices were rightly concerned, for example, about how they could repudiate Aereo without harming various online "cloud-based" storage and transmission services. Increasingly, Americans are piping material over high-bandwidth wires or wireless connections to their television sets, tablets and phones. This promises to reshape programmers' business models in ways that make their products and delivery more responsive to and more convenient for consumers.

The law should ensure that people who create content can obtain fair rewards from copyright protections. But it must also allow innovators to innovate.
